(Charlotte) – Due to the change in venue for the closing night of the 2012 Democratic National Convention, vehicle, pedestrian and other security restrictions for the area surrounding the Time Warner Cable Arena will remain in place through early Friday morning, September 7.

Road closures, parking and pedestrian restrictions scheduled to be implemented for Thursday near the Bank of America Stadium will be lifted, including restrictions on I-277 which will now remain open.

Additional information on updates to the current vehicle and pedestrian restrictions, as well as city transit and other services will be provided as it becomes available. Temporary security restrictions not previously identified may be necessary and may not be announced in advance.
